

THREE THREE CENTS

STEALING FROM THE MAILS.

CAUSES CLERK KLEY'S ARREST.

He Pillaged at Station E the Money Letters of Out-of-Town Shoppers—Anonymous Accusations of Theft Lead to Another Arrest.

Business houses and citizens who receive letters through Post Office Station K, at Sixth avenue and 125th street, have been complaining of the loss of letters containing sums of value. From Oct. 1 to Dec. 8 the goods firm of Stern Brothers reported the loss of eighty letters, H. O'Neill & Co., sixty letters, and B. Altman & Co., thirty letters, said to contain money orders and postal notes from out-of-town customers.

Post Office Inspector Newcome received, recently from Station K a check for $92.50, drawn by Edwin Tucker on the Europa Bank of Europe, Kan., and payable to Stern Brothers, which was found crumpled in the street opposite 190 Broadway. The check was sent by Tucker to Stern Brothers, and was cashed by them.

The name of Albert Jacobel, further, of 12 St. Marks place, appeared as endorser. He declared that he had never cashed the check. Inspector Newcome then compared the check with a handwriting of mail carrier J. J. O'Connell, who had been in the neighborhood of the place where the check was found.

The undersiding of the note was pronounced the same as that of the anonymous letters. Jenks was released yesterday afternoon on his $10,000 bail. Who stole the letters has not yet been discovered. The technical charge against Jenks is using cancelled stamps.

LEAVING THE RUSSIAN OUT.

Mail Service Only One Day for Angering a New York Politician.

In the ten-day house at the Tombs a SUN reporter yesterday afternoon found Frank Arglander, the Russian who was arrested in Grand street by Policeman Madden, of whom he had inquired the way to the corner of Howard and Elm streets. Arglander was entertaining his fellow prisoners by story telling. He is tall and shapely. His face is pale and thin. He is about thirty years old. He was born in Moscow where his father, he says, owns a small restaurant.

"I don't think the Justice understood my case rightly," he said, hesitatingly. "Was it right to let me go? I am innocent. I am innocent to me?" I don't think I was right. It displeased me. I have been in Berlin, in Paris, in London, in Vienna before now. I have never been in jail. If I were a Jew, I would inform the Chief of Police when Justice Whitfield released Arglander yesterday."

An Iron Curtain at the Standard Theatre.
An iron curtain was hung at the Standard Theatre yesterday afternoon. It is designed, in case of fire, to divide the auditorium from the stage. The stage is supplied with large hose connecting through pipes with two gallon tanks on the roof and an electric fire hose will be placed in position in the galleries and on the main floor. It is thought that should a fire occur on the stage, it would not reach the auditorium. The new theatre is constructed entirely of fireproof materials.
